Final rejection

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-5,7-12 have been rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Norstrom et al (6,657,242).

The rejection sent on 8/31/04 stands valid. Please refer to the rejection as part of this document for future reference. This document will specifically address the amended portion of the claims.

The prior art discloses all claimed subject matter as discussed in the previous rejection with the exception of using similar expressions to define the structural relationships of device elements for one skilled in the art to correlate the structures based on structural similarities irrespective of expression differences.

The amended claim language now introduces "a selective implant collector region formed in the substrate and beneath the opening" as a distinguishing factor of the claimed invention from the prior art. However, method of making a given layer has no patentable value in device claims so far as the final product arrives at similar structures. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art to form the collector layer of the prior art by any method known in the art including deep implantation, since implantation results in forming layers deep into a substrate which is the usual location of collectors in bipolar structures faster than other methods such as diffusion.

Claims 14-17, 20,21 have been allowed.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.

Examiner's answer to applicant's argument

Clearly, the applicant strongly argues on the method of forming the collector region of the claimed bipolar structure as the basis of patentable element in contrast to the patent. However, as explained above, structure claims strictly deal with structures and their examination does not consider the methods used to make their layers. Therefore, the way the collector is made, although could be different from the way the related layer in the patent was made, has no patentable weight in the structural claims of the claimed invention.
